From Cargo Theft Response to Intermodal Fraud Resilience

the evolution from reactive theft response to proactive freight fraud resilience across the intermodal ecosystem

- The Cargo Theft Working Group is evolving from a theft-focused forum to a strategic industry resource

- Focused on identifying, preventing, and mitigating emerging freight fraud risks across the intermodal supply chain.

- Supporting IANA's long-term security and fraud resilience objectives through monthly collaboration and industry engagement.

Expanding from cargo theft response to addressing emerging fraud risks across critical intermodal handoffs

Shipper → Drayage → Rail → Terminal → Motor Carrier → Customer

Risk Assessment

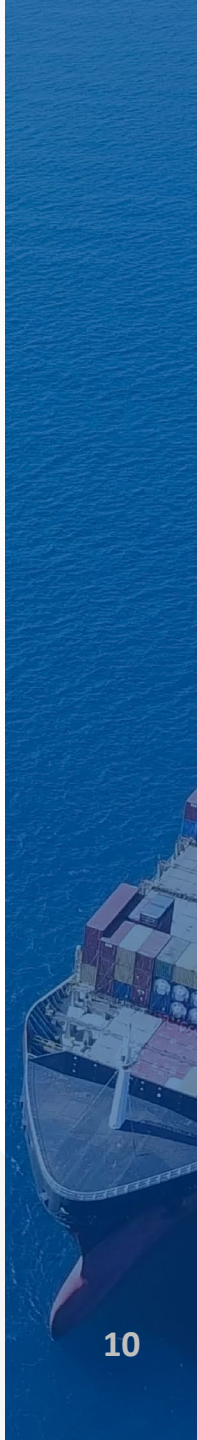

- Identity Fraud
- Documentation Fraud
- Double Brokering
- Cargo Theft
- Impersonation
- Cyber-Enabled Fraud

Strategy/Resource

- Risk Identification
- Intelligence Sharing
- Prevention Strategies

IANA INTERMODAL EXPO 2026

Freight Fraud Prevention

SEPTEMBER 14, 2026

A Wake-up call

$304.6M

estimated cargo losses in Q2 2026

more than double Q2 2025, even as reported incidents declined.

$564K

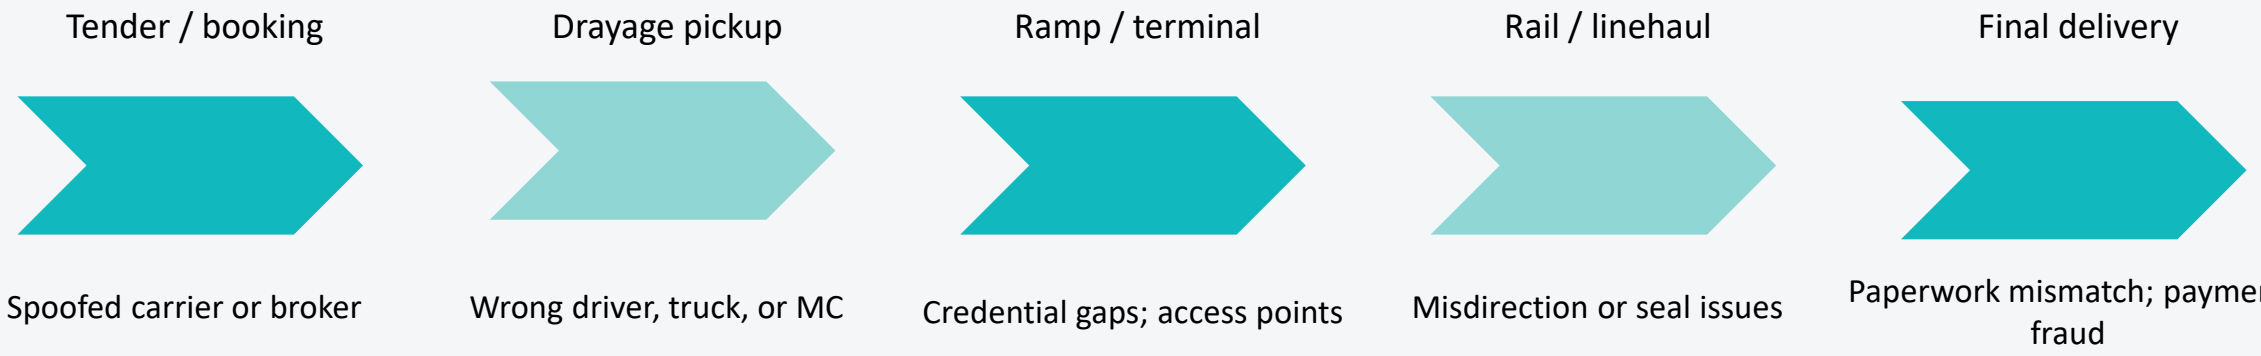

average value among thefts with a reported commodity value

A small number of multimillion-dollar thefts sharply increased severity.

- Takeaway: The threat is shifting from “more theft” to smarter targeting: high-value freight, legitimate-looking identities, and handoffs where paperwork appears to check out.

Why this belongs in an intermodal safety and security conversation

Intermodal creates value through speed, scale, and handoffs. Fraud exploits the same points.

- Takeaway: Recent global cargo theft reporting called out rising rail theft, persistent facility losses, and increasingly sophisticated multimodal schemes—exactly the environment intermodal leaders manage every day.

From force to fraud

Traditional theft is still real—but a growing share of risk is built on deception: stolen credentials, lookalike emails, altered documents, re-brokering, and shipment misdirection.

- The old Q: “Was the truck secured?”
- The new Q: “Did the right party get the right freight at every handoff?”

What changes for your team?

- Verification cannot stop at tender.
- Dock-level confirmation matters.
- Exception reporting needs to be fast.
- Collaboration closes visibility gap.

What the Freight Fraud Prevention Hub brings to the table

FFPH is a free, industry-first resource built to help organizations like yours identify, prevent, and respond to freight fraud and cargo theft.

- Practical workflows: Carrier/shipper vetting guidance, fraud prevention checklists, and usable education for teams.
- Threat reporting: A free, anonymous NMFTA Threat Report Portal to help surface patterns and strengthen visibility.
- Industry collaboration: Resources and partner insights that bring carriers, 3PLs, shippers, technology providers, and associations into the same conversation.
